Gay Marriages: The Pros and Cons

Narrator: Just another normal afternoon at school, the 5 best girl friends gathered together doing their everyday routine, chatting, spending quality time together. And all of a sudden, a controversy came into their conversation. And they decided to do a pros and cons.

Stephanie: Hey, have you guys seen the news that the famous actor Neil Patrick Harris had finally got married to his long-term boyfriend?

Hailey: Oh. Wow, really? This is such exhilarating news. It’s high time that people started to raise the awareness of homosexual right. Finally!!!

Samantha: Wait... gay marriage? How can homosexuals even exist? I never agree with gay marriages!!!

Nicole: I know, right!? Why would people even support gay marriages? It shouldn’t even be legalized.

Stephanie: Woah, guys! calm down!! Calm down!!! I know it’s been a controversial issue, but there’s no need to be so agitated.
Amanda: What’s so bad about gay marriages? I don’t think gay marriages are any different from the regular ones. I definitely support gay marriages.

Nicole: The definition of marriage has traditionally been defined as being between a man and a woman.

Samantha: And what’s more, the tradition is measured in millennia, not centuries or decades.

Nicole: Now, I’m pretty sure you have a clue about how long that is.

Hailey: I don’t see any problems with gay marriages. They are just like us. But they are attracted to the same sex. That’s all.

Amanda: And they definitely deserve the right to love as we do.

Samantha: Are you out of your mind? God created men and women for a reason. If he wanted people to be gay, he would’ve made just men or just women instead of both of them.

Nicole: Exactly! And I do believe from the “very” bottom of my heart that the Bible says that a homosexual lifestyle is sinful. I don’t wanna support anything that against God’s design. Let’s put it this way, God created Adam and Eve. Not Adam and Steve.

Stephanie: Oh Geez! I feel like I’m trapped in the middle. Ugh… I decide to remain neutral.

Amanda: Stephanie, hear me out. People have the right to love who they wanna love and should not be questioned by anyone.

Hailey: How people choose to live their lives is a personal matter. And if they wanna get married to someone of the same gender. Let them~~~

Nicole: Imagine if all of the human societies were full of homosexuals. Well, which will never happen. BUT! Humans would cease to exist because homosexuals can’t naturally procreate.

Samantha: Marriage is for procreation and shouldn’t be extended to same-sex couples!! Because they can’t produce children together. Therefore; homosexuality is not natural.

Nicole: It’s morally wrong.
Hailey: Then what do you say to those heterosexual couples who don’t want kids? They aren’t “PRODUCING” kids either!!

Nicole: For those heterosexual couples who can’t have kids or don’t want them even in those cases there is still the potential to produce kids. And medical advances may allow them to procreate.

Samantha: Heterosexual couples who don’t wish to have children are still biologically capable of having them. And may ‘Change their minds!’ BUT, homosexual~~ Nope, not even a chance~

Amanda: You can’t possibly just object to the legalization of gay marriage due to the procreation problem.

Hailey: Haven’t you ever heard of “Child adoption?” Homosexual couples can still adopt children and raise them normally like other straight couples do.

Nicole: That sounds pretty much like an ideally utopian dream. But I’m sorry, children need both a mom and a dad. Girls who are raised apart from their fathers are reportedly at higher risk for ‘early sexual activities.” Oh! And teenage pregnancy as well!

Stephanie: Well! And from my point of view, children without a mom are deprived the emotional support and the Unique advice that only mommy can provide.

Hailey: Come on!! Stephanie! Kids who are raised by gay couples can still grow up in a normal and healthy environment.

Amanda: Wait, you guys are missing the whole point. First of all, it’s not a choice to be a homosexual. You don’t choose who you love, you just do. You fall in love with him even without your noticing. It’s uncontrollable.

Hailey: You fall in love with the way he talks, the way he sleeps, and most importantly, the way he makes you feel like the most special person in the entire world. That’s the power of love. Gay couples should have just the same right as heterosexual couples do. THE RIGHT TO LOVE.

Nicole: Marriage is a privilege, not a right.

Hailey: And love is love, no one should be denied of their right to marry the one they love.

Amanda: Whether it’s a boy or a girl!

Stephanie: Yeah! I think it sounds fair. People need to open up their minds and stop being so uptight.

Nicole: OH come on people! Read Bible for God’s sake.

Hailey: Using the Bible as a reason is completely nonsense. God created everyone equal.

Stephanie: We live in a world of equality. It would be a form of discrimination if we don’t accept their love.

Amanda: Yes, Steph. You’re on the right track.

Narrator: Meanwhile, the bell rang, recess was over and they never got to talk further about it again, but what we got from it was that it doesn’t hurt anyone so why can’t they enjoy the pleasure of love as we do? No one should ever be deprived of the right to love.
